There is a burglary every two minutes.

The number of burglaries has more than doubled over the last 30 years.* All statistics and research regarding burglary rates point to the same conclusion: A home is broken into every two minutes in Germany. Crime statistics reveal that 167 136 domestic burglaries were reported in 2015. Break-ins mainly occur as darkness falls. Around 60 percent of domestic burglaries took place in the evening or at night.* However, the risk of burglary during daylight hours should not be underestimated.

The proportion of failed break-ins is steadily increasing. According to police, this is due to increased use of security technology. In 2003, 30 percent of break-ins were foiled by security systems whereas in 2014 this figure was over 40 percent. In other words, investing in security systems is worth your while.

Access organised, security guaranteed.

Security has never been so easy.

You can assign specific access authorisations to each individual person. This means that the gardener can only access the garage, or the children cannot enter your office. You decide who can open which door. Different coloured caps help with organisation, access authorisations are defined on the key for each colour.

The Key to Your World.

A single key for everything.

The benefits start with a key that suits you.

Personal security and freedom are the focus today. With a KESO key, you can open all doors, windows and locks, or operate switches, simply and conveniently. You save time and reduce maintenance costs. KESO locking systems can be expanded to suit your needs, both mechanically as well as mechatronically. An additional RFID allows for integration in electronic systems (e.g. alarm systems).
